

Dear Mustafa,

18th August, 2014

The Jackson 5 had six successful years, from the late 60s to the early 70s. My favourite song is 'I want you back' - attached is a link for listening while you read the rest of this postcard.

For the last six years we have been dancing to the tunes of the Jackson 4, namely the heads of the major central banks, Janet Yellen, Mario Draghi, Mark Carney, and Haruhiko Kuroda. They meet every year at Jackson Hole, with their next get together being this week.

The Jackson 4's greatest hits may not be as catchy as the original band's; 'Quantitative Easing', 'Zero Interest Rate Policy', 'Long-Term Refinancing Operation', 'Lower for Longer', and 'Noise with Stagnant Wages', however, the market has absolutely loved them. In fact, we can't get enough of them and the songs have been on eternal repeat.

However, there comes a time in every band's career when the strain starts to show. The music starts to get stale, the better looking members think they should go solo, or musical differences come to the fore; some members are only able to revisit the back catalogue; some are already writing new tunes.

What is certain is that the Jackson 4, who have been singing in perfect harmony for the past 6 years, are showing signs of fatigue. The meeting in Wyoming may be the swan song of this great band. As Michael Jackson broke away from his group, will a new Mr. Jackson please step forward and get 'Off the Wall.'

See you very soon - Chris
